A: All words that go in an alphabet (i.e. all letters of the Roman or Greek alphabets, or all letters of the Sanskrit alphabet) are sometimes called alphabets too. This is a bit of a stretch, but in mathematics, one could imagine words like algebra, angle, angle-vector, and angle-polygon as the names of their respective sets. However, if I were to create a hypothetical theory of mathematics, I'd probably not name it after the word angle, but rather, I would name it after a superlative like the Greatest Angle, or The Greatest Angle in the Universe. A: It's just an alphabet of characters that you have in your vocabulary. That's why it's an alphabet to start with. Zip.Patterns of use and adherence to antiepileptic drugs in adults with epilepsy in Canada: a population-based survey. To describe the patterns of use and adherence to antiepileptic drugs (AED) in patients with epilepsy. A cross-sectional survey was conducted in 992 adult patients with epilepsy who were members of the general population in the Greater Toronto Area of Ontario, Canada. A self-administered questionnaire on sociodemographic and clinical characteristics of epilepsy and AED medication use was mailed to the members of the community. Rates of uncontrolled seizures, AED-related side effects, and adherence to AED treatment were also determined. Of 992 patients with epilepsy, 818 (82%) completed the survey; 217 (24%) patients were taking at least 1 AED, and 75 (9%) were taking ≥ 2 AEDs. The most frequently used AED was carbamazepine (172 [20%]), followed by phenobarbital (50 [6%]) and valproic acid (49 [6%]). The average duration of use was 14.9 (SD, 9.4) years for the first AED, 4.8 (SD, 5.0) years for the second AED, and 4.2 (SD, 5.5) years for the third AED. Co-therapy with >1 AED was reported by 23 (14%) patients. The most frequent reason for switching AED was lack of efficacy in 50 (22%) patients and severe side effects in 22 (10%) patients. Of the 76 (13%) patients not adherent to their AEDs, the most frequent reasons cited were side effects in 35 (45%) patients and feeling "the same as before" in 29 (38%) patients. AEDs are used for substantial periods of time in Canadian patients with epilepsy, with frequent changes in therapies. Improved education about seizure control and side effects is needed for these patients and their physicians. The Google Nexus S brings Android to the iPhone 2.x crowd, and will be followed by the HTC Nexus One, Samsung Nexus S II, and the Nexus Prime, all of which are invite-only Nexus One releases. This will cement Android's position as the de
